D. M. PARRY RETURNS.

Eastern Manufacturers Amused by

Central Labor Questions. D. M. Parry, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, has just returned from New York, where he has been a meeting of the executive council of the association. Mr. Parry said that he read the questions prepared by the Central Labor Union for him to answer and the manufacturers seemed to enjoy them. He said they failed to find any in the list that they could not answer in a very simple manner. Mr. Parry intimated that he ended investigating the stabbing affair of John Crosby, an employe of his factory, who became involved in an argument with a union man which ended in Crosby being attacked and cut seriously in the back. When asked what of importance was done at the meeting of the executive council of the association, Mr. Parry said that plans had been arranged to call a meeting of representatives of all manufacturing associa-tions and build up a large new federation of employers. For this reason the council did not adopt the constitution drawn by a committee appointed from the national association for the purpose. The new federation will be an amaigamation of all the manufacturers and employers of the country, formed on its own principles. The plan les the raising of a million and a half ollars as a sum with which to fight strikes and labor organizations. The place and time of meeting were not fixed. Mr. Parry was much encouraged with the outlook among the employers and said they were gradually making an advance on labor mions. He claimed that already in the East the rule of the walking delegate is roken and it will not be long until he will be a figurehead in the West.

BARNUM & BAILEY SHOW IS POPU-LAR IN THIS CITY.

Big Tent Crowded Afternoon and Night with People Who Express Their Satisfaction.

SIGHTS AND

GOOD FEATURES OF THE THREE RING PERFORMANCES.

Street Parade in the Morning Seen by Immense Crowd-Among Freaks

Should the wraith of Phineas T. Barnum wander back across the Styx, circus hungry, and gorge itself with the old familiar smell and sights of the circus ring, it would doubtless nod its wise head, smile its wise old smile and clap its hands in noiseless delight at the evolution of the old Barnum show into the Barnum & Bailey aggregation, which has done its part in adding to the gayety of nations.

Boiled down into one significant sentence the thousand and one expressions of pleasure after the afternoon performance yesterday might be put, "It's a great show." Menagerie, side shows and the three-ring performances in the big top all were included in the sweeping verdict, "It's a great show." Ten thousand people, at a moderate estimate, saw the afternoon performance, but so great is the size of the main tent that it was only comfortably NO GRAFTERS.

Two things, in addition to the regular attractions, were commented on with favor by the crowd yesterday afternoon. In the first place the Barnum & Bailey show has as little use for grafters and sure thing men as the devil has for holy water; and the freedom from annoyances of that sort was gratifying to its patrons. Again, the comfort and convenience of the seating arrangements were especially pleasing. So solid are the broad, high tiers of seats, so restful the chairs provided on the reserved seats that there was not the usual weariness and fagged-out feeling that usually follow a long circus performance. The big afternoon crowd took an hour to see the menagerie and the side shows. My Lord, the elephant, eternally swaying back-ward and forward on his great legs, his searching, ourling, never at rest, nervous as a delicate woman and big as a barn, was as usual the center of attraction in the animal show. The Barnum & Bailey animals are fat, sleek creatures that show the effects of good feed and careful handling. Coco, the baby elephant, much too young to leave the side of his big mother, delighted the children, and reached for their peanuts with an assurance that made him the favorite of the animal tent. The $30,000 team of giraffes was all that the press agent had painted them; the royal Bengal tigers exhibited a becoming fierceness, and the zebras, the convicts of the show, were not the least interesting of the trapped forest denizens.

The delegates divided on the neck to startling proportions; Krao, "the missing link;" fire-eaters, whirling dervishes, a fat lady and a living skeleton, a giant 7 feet 6 inches tall, and dozens of other truly remarkable human beings. > So much happened in the tent that it was difficult to single out the best of everything. The trained elephants, under the direction of George Bates, C. J. Mooney and William Emery, were well worth seeing, The giant beasts went through their tricks with the agility and docility of lapdogs. The show in the second ring was little short of thrilling. A battle scene was depicted in which two elephants carried out a dead officer. The equestrian performances were popular with the crowd and were repeatedly applauded. William Wallett, Ella Branda and Miss said that it had been unable to come to any Feeley, the crack riders of the Barnum & settlement with the Abattoir Company and Balley show, gave an exhibition of cleverness that is seldom equaled. and were encored when their tricks were over. Wilkes Lloyd's bareback vaulting feats, and the intelligence of the little dog, which seemed equally at home on the horse's back, were features of the secondring performance. The Barnum & Bailey aggregation has so many good things under the main top that it would require too much space to give proper commendation to all. Selecting especially good features, almost at random, it may be said that the Imperial Viennese troupe of acrobats gave a performance worth traveling far to see. Their feats had the added fascination of imminent danger, and the crowd held its breath, expecting to see some daring member of the troupe dashed to death. The Clarksonians, champion aerialists, were applauded for a remarkable double somersault and twist.

The high school horse exhibition, preceding the chariot races, furnished an opportunity for the famous trained horse Evergreen to put forth his best efforts. Although the afternoon crowd was large, fully 15,000 people saw the night performance. The big tent, which can take care of 14,000 people, was packed and jammed until even standing room was at a premium. The size of the crowd simply proved that this city will give the best of patronage to a good attraction, whether it be circus or any other form of entertainment for the people at large.

Postoffice.

A. W. Cooley, of New York, one of the members of the Civil-service Commission, is in the city, and in company with Mr. Dynes, secretary of the local commission, is inspecting the Indianapolis postoffice. The commission is formulating a plan to consolidate all the civil service boards throughout the country into districts, with headquarters in the largest city in each district. A man will be specially detailed by the department to look after the business of the board in each district, and there will always be some one at that point to give information. There will be an auxiliary clerk at each of the headquarters to give out applications for examinations. Mr. Cooley is very well pleased with the manner in which the postoffice is being run.

The meeting last night was a stormy one, the heated agitation revolving about the he convention of the American Federation of Labor, which will be held in Boston in issue, some contending that the election should be held last night and others maintaining that it should be postponed for two weeks until the trustees could audit the books and ascertain the financial standing of the organization. The two sides clashed and charges of various nature were made against each other. Those in favor of immediate election were led by George Custer, a national vice president of the Iron Molders, who claimed that the opposition wanted time to do a little "wire pulling." The question was discussed until 11 o'clock. when the election was left open and a up at the next meeting.

ROUTINE BUSINESS. The business transacted last night was largely routine. The trustees reported that they had secured Pierson's Hall on North Delaware street as a meeting hall for the union and the next meeting will be held there. The grievance committee reported that Frank Nesler's tailoring establishment had been placed on the unfair list because of the refusal to unionize the shop. A representative of the coopers from Hill & Co. reported that the strike which had been on there during the summer had been declared off, as nothing could be accom-plished by it. CITY BOARD OF HEALTH WILL BE-GIN ITS CAMPAIGN TO-DAY.

Sanitarian Buehler Estimates that There Are Not Over Six Hundred Children Unvaccinated.

In order to forestall a possible smallpox epidemic in the public schools this winter all children in the schools, incluiding the pupils in the high schools, who have not been vaccinated within the last three years will be vaccinated this week under the direction of Dr. Eugene Buehler, secretary of the Board of Health and city sanitarian.

There are fifty-eight public schools in the city, including the high schools, and Dr. Buehler says there are probably ten or twelve children in each school who have not been vaccinated during the past three years. There will be no age limit or any other kind of an exemption in Dr. Buehler's vaccination campaign, and any pupil in any grade school or high school who cannot show a certificate showing that he or she has been vaccinated during the past three years, or can show any other evidence of vaccination in that time, will be vaccinated this week.

Dr. Buehler, with eight senior students from the Central College of Physicians and Surgeons and the Medical College of Indiana, will begin the work this afternoon. Dr. Buehler says there are probably between five hundred and six hundred unvaccinated pupils in all the schools. The work will require two or three days, it is expected.
"Last year the Board of Health did no vaccinating of pupils in the public schools before the winter term," said Dr. Buehler last night. "We have decided that it will do more good to do this work before cold weather, and that by vaccinating the children now the possibility of a smallpox epidemic in the schools is lessened. According to the number of children in the public schools. I don't think the number of those who have not been vaccinated within the past three years will be found large."
